Student Organization Officer of the Year

Student organizations depend on their officers to help define the missions of their groups, build plans to achieve their goals, and provide encouragement and motivation to members while also managing expectations and providing important oversight. From presidents and treasurers, to vice-presidents and membership chairs, all officers can have an incredible impact on their organization. In 2016, The George Washington University recognized these individuals for the first time with the Student Organization Officer of the Year Award and we look forward to doing so again!

Qualifications:

Any individual who has been an officer of a student organization in the past academic year is eligible for this award. Nominations can be for officers from any student organization registered with the Center for Student Engagement. Nominees should be officers who have served in their role starting no earlier than February 2017 and no later than November 2017.

Nominations should clearly outline how the nominated officer had a meaningful and lasting impact on their student organization. Nominees should demonstrate a strong affinity to their organization and to the George Washington University in general. Finally, nominees should have proven leadership skills and qualities, including an ability to motivate and inspire their peers, and should serve as a role model in the GW community and beyond.
